Oversikt

Much has been written about the most renowned scuba diving destination in Costa Rica, Cocos Island, however liveaboard divers visiting 'the rich coast' can also dive El Caño Island. The diving here is very different from Cocos, but is of such quality as to be considered world-class in its own right. This amazing marine biological reserve of Isla del Caño lies a mere 10 miles (16 km) offshore from the Osa Peninsula. The reserve's waters showcase gorgeous coral reefs with good visibility.

Cano island is known as the best place to scuba dive in Costa Rica, except for Cocos Island. However, Cano is much more accessible, and there are many dive resorts and dive companies that can take you from Drake Bay or other areas in the Osa Peninsula to the dive sites.

Come explore the tropical paradise of Cano Island located just 12 km off the coast of Costa Rica. The Island has an altitude of about 3000 feet and is a heavy forest with several small rivers which allows it to stay an intense green color all year long.

El Cano Island is located off the south pacific coast of Costa Rica in front of the Osa Peninsula and one of the most bio diverse places on earth. humpback whales, pilot whales, white tip sharks, black tip sharks great hammerhead sharks, nurse sharks, tuna, amberjacks, wahoo, rays, mantas, turtles, and enormous schools of fish. It has a total area of 320 acres and is a marine park with protected waters.e. Here you will find head corals, cup corals, and sea fans.

Cano Island and its natural beauty give you beautiful 15 foot reefs to explore.

The primary attractions in El Caño Island are the resident tropical fish and the beautiful colorful corals and marine flora, you can also find the occasional large pelagic and marine mammals, i. There is no disappointment or lack of shark sightings. Due to it being protected, removal of any marine life, coral or shells is prohibited. The control limits how many divers are allowed into its waters and which areas can be explored. Stingrays, dolphins, turtles and morays are also popular in this destination. Most divers come away with memories of seeing sharks in these waters which range in sizes of up to ten feet. While taking a short ferry to the island there is a possibility of witnessing the joyful play of dolphins or even during the migration season, which is July through September. Scuba divers have the pleasure of exploring under water caves and reefs. Sightings of whale sharks, marlin, and Bottle-Nosed dolphin. This destination for scuba divers has been kept from harm due to it being controlled and regulated as a Biological Reserve. Cano Island has been declared one of the snorkelers can enjoy the many species of marine life while the island is surrounded by lush tropical forests and amazing marine life. Occasionally, there are
